- specific job on a regular basis. Repetitive performance of a particular task allows a worker to gain experience in that area and leads to specialisation.
- (ii) Clarity in working relationships: The establishment of working relationships clarifies lines of communication and specifies who is to report to whom. This removes ambiguity in transfer of information and instructions. It helps in creating a hierarchical order thereby enabling the fixation of responsibility and specification of the extent of authority to be exercised by an individual.
 - (iii) Optimum utilization of resources: Organising leads to the proper usage of all material, financial and human resources. The proper assignment of jobs avoids overlapping of work and also makes possible the best use of resources. Avoidance of duplication of work helps in preventing confusion and minimising the wastage of resources and efforts.
 - (iv) Adaptation to change: The process of organising allows a business enterprise to accommodate changes in the business environment. It allows the organisation structure to be suitably modified and the revision of inter-relationships amongst managerial levels to pave the way for a smooth transition. It also provides much needed stability to the enterprise as it can then continue to survive and grow inspite of changes.
 - (v) Effective administration: Organising provides a clear description of jobs and related duties. This helps to avoid confusion and duplication. Clarity in working relationships enables proper execution of work. Management of an enterprise thereby becomes easy and this brings effectiveness in administration.
 - (vi) Development of personnel: Organising stimulates creativity amongst the managers. Effective delegation allows the managers to reduce their workload by assigning routine jobs to their subordinates. The reduction in workload by delegation is not just necessary because of limited capacity of an individual but also allows the manager to develop new methods and ways of performing tasks. It gives them the time to explore areas for growth and the opportunity to innovate thereby strengthening the company's competitive position. Delegation also develops in the subordinate the ability to deal effectively with challenges and helps them to realise their full potential.
 - (vii) Expansion and growth: Organising helps in the growth and diversification of an enterprise

Topic 1: Nature of business

What are businesses and how do we classify them

- Producing goods + services
- Profit, Income, Employment, Choices, Innovation, Entrepreneurship and Risks, Wealth and Quality of Life.

What is a business:
The organisational effort of individuals to sell and produce, for a profit, product that satisfy consumers' needs and wants.

→ A group of people that make and sell us things that we want and need to make money.

What they do:

(sell)
Businesses → Products → Goods and Services

Goods are tangible: it can be touched and seen.

- E.g. Woolworths provide fruits and vegetables that can be touched and consumed.

Services are intangible: things that are done for us (someone doing activities for you)

Roles:

Profit - Money left after all the expenses have been deducted from the revenue

- Revenue: money received from selling products
- Expenses: all the cost (what you pay for)

Employment + Income - Businesses employ people to work for them, and in return they get paid money for providing time to take products

Choices - Businesses allow consumers to be able to choose the different features, quality and price of item

Innovation + Entrepreneurship and Risks - Businesses allow for new ideas and people can start and operate their own business

Wealth and Quality of life - Improve society by selling products and paying taxes to the government, and in return they provide goods for us to use, such as parks and libraries. Quantity of life is improved, as businesses provide goods and needs that make our lives easier.
